Look out, Bob White, they are after you.

The chances are that there will be no contests growing out of the election of county officials.

Col. J. H. Acklen, of Tennessee, was commissioned chief warden of the United States, under the recently enacted Federal migratory bird law.

The verdict finding B. W. Wright guilty of conspiring with others to burn a tobacco warehouse in Graves county has been affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

Prince William of Sweden is being sued for divorce by the princess, to whom he was married five years ago. She is a daughter of Grand Duke Paul of Russia.

The Archduchess Isabella Marie, married 18 months ago to her cousin Prince George of Bavaria, has left her husband and is working as a nurse in a Vienna hospital.

In spite of his defiant attitude Gen. Huerta is about to be eliminated from the dictatorship of Mexico. When Uncle Sam puts his foot down, it will be with the support of all the great powers.

Huerta was not to be found Thursday until late at night when he was located at the home of Gen. Blanquet in seclusion. It will take something more than a blanket to hide him if he stirs Uncle Sam's ire much more.

A band of Mexican rebels on Saturday massacred five federal officers and nine soldiers at Muzquiz in the state of Coahuila. The fourteen men fought until their last cartridge was fired; then they were overpowered and killed.

John Waters, of Summit, N. J., went into the navy in 1863 and his son three years old, was put in an orphan's home and subsequently adopted by a man who gave him the name of James Fritzpatrick. After 50 years, father and son have just been re-united.

The farmers of Arkansas have filed a complaint that the bankers of Little Rock will not make direct loans to the farmers out of the $5,000,000 of crop money sent to that State by the government. They lend the money to the buyers and commission men.

The papers of the State are commenting on an item in the Kentuckian calling attention to the fact that we have three local officers named Smith—Denny P. Smith, Ira D. Smith and Jewell W. Smith. Since thinking it over, there are five of them. Ira L. Smith, Library Director and School Trustee and Councilman Hiram Smith, col., are the other two.

Ten towns were destroyed and several hundred persons killed in an earthquake which occurred Friday, Nov. 7, in the mountainous Peruvian province of Aymaraes. News of the disaster reached the outside world by courier. The number of known dead is 300 so far, but it was believed that several hundred more bodies would be recovered from the wrecked towns.

Nearly $400,000 For Teachers.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.—Checks aggregating $399,591.07 have been mailed from the State Treasurer to the County Superintendents, the amount of the November distribution of the State school fund for the pay of the county teachers.

Letters are being sent to all of the County Superintendents by the Department of Education explaining that it will be impossible to extend the school year to seven months until the next General Assembly passes an enabling act. Many inquiries have been received since it was announced that the schools have sufficient funds for this purpose; the County Boards desiring to make contracts for the extra months as soon as possible.

TOBACCO MARKET

Is Beginning To Look Up In Hogshead Business Here.

SALES OF 79 HOGSHEADS.

Loose Floor Men Are Ready For Business and Opening Day Near.

The local tobacco market is looking up somewhat in the hogshead department and the loose floor opening day is drawing near. The loose floor operators are ready for deliveries and with a new firm out for business it may be presumed that everybody will soon get busy. It is hoped that the dry, cold weather which prevailed last December, will not put in its appearance the coming month. As will be remembered, the unfavorable weather of last December cut down Christmas trade somewhere in the neighborhood of 50 per cent, and Santa Claus did not fill the usual number of stockings on Christmas morning, though delayed calls were made after the opening up of the new year, after the weather changed and farmers were able to market their product of the weed.

ONLY SIX MONTHS

Superintendent Hamlett's Plan For Additional Month Not Possible.

Teachers were happy and children the reverse when the state press heralded the news to the four ends of the Commonwealth that country schools were to have seven months instead of six.

The State Superintendent found that funds were available and was pretty well satisfied that the school law permitted him to instruct the teachers to teach the extra month. He, however, submitted the question to Attorney General Garnett and his construction of the law is that the statute makes no provision for another month. This being the case, nothing can be done in the premises until the Legislature meets, when a bill will be presented allowing the extra month.

Committee's Thanks.

We, the committee in charge of the home talent play, "Fun on The Podunk Limited," presented at the opera house, wish in this way to extend our heartiest thanks and also that of the K. of P. Lodge, to each and every one, large and small, who took a part in the play and in that way contributed to its success. We assure you that we are very grateful to you for your faithfulness and hard work through it all, and we trust that each one who took a part in the production will meet us at the K. of P. Lodge room next Thursday night Nov. 20th, where we will try to entertain you for a few hours in a social and other ways and the pleasure will be all our own. We thank you.

SCHOOL FOR THE FARMERS

Will Open This Morning With Teachers From State University.

SPECIAL TOPICS DISCUSSED

Geoffrey Morgan, County Agriculturist, To Preside Over Sessions.

The first session of the Farmers' School will be held at the Avalon this morning at 9:30 o'clock. There will be a full corps of teachers from the State University, their specialties being as here given.

M. B. Hendrick, Soils and Crops.

J. H. Carmody, Horticulture.

Miss Mary E. Sweeney, Home Economics.

T. R. Bryant, Live Stock.

George Roberts, Professor of Agronomy, or soils and crops, in the State University.

Geoffrey Morgan will probably preside over the meetings, which will be held twice a day. The afternoon sessions will be at 1:30.

There will be no delay in starting, as the program cannot be interfered with.

All farmers are expected and urged to attend and the public generally is invited.

THREE-CORNERED RACE

To Get Into Congressman Stanley's Shoes Looks Probable.

Prof. Barksdale Hamlett, state superintendent of public instruction, who passed through Louisville on his way to Hopkinsville, was reticent in regard to the report that he would become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for congress in the second district. However Prof. Hamlett is showing symptoms of the congressional bee and his friends would not be surprised at the proper time he pitched his chapeau in the circle. Judge J. W. Hanson, of Henderson, and Judge D. H. Kinchloe, of Hopkins, are as yet the only announced candidates to succeed Congressman Stanley.—Louisville Times.

Appeal To Governor.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.—Citizens of Grand Rivers, the town founded by Thomas Lawson in the Panhandle section of Livingston county, where the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers flow within a mile of each other, in the hope of making it the Pittsburgh of the South, have appealed to Gov. McCreary in their dilemma over the late election. They elected George W. Jolly Mayor with a full ticket; but not knowing the law, as City Clerk W. F. Jewell explained, they had the ballots printed at their own expense instead of securing ballots through the County Clerk. He has refused to certify the returns from the town. Gov. McCreary turned the communication over to the Attorney General's department.

Goethals to Hold On.

Col. George W. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama Canal, will not retire soon, President Wilson has let it be known.

STATE LAWS

Authorizing Whipping Post Are Not National Affairs.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Attorney-General McReynolds was asked by Representative Evans of Montana to interfere with the whipping of six Delaware convicts, set for Saturday. Representative Evans declared that although he had introduced resolutions in the house designed to prevent the punishment because it is "cruel and unusual," and prohibited by the constitution, he did not believe congress would act before Saturday.

After an investigation the department found that numerous decisions by the supreme court held that the prohibition in the constitution could not be applied to punishment of criminals by state authorities. Representative Evans was so informed.

FOUNDATION

Work For Government Building May Begin Soon.

The indications are that the contractor for the postoffice building will begin excavating for the foundation in a few days. The postmaster has received from the public buildings architect quite a lot of papers in the way of plans and specifications and mail addressed to the man to sublet the foundation work but he has not been seen, and the presumption is that he has not arrived, as he has not called for his mail.

THE ATHENAEUM.

But one paper was read at the Athenaeum Thursday night, that of Dr. F. M. Stites, who substituted for Dr. T. W. Blakey. His subject was a historical paper on the "Monroe Doctrine," which proved to be a timely treatment of a most interesting topic. It brought on a general discussion of the Mexican crisis, many members taking part.

The following members were present: President W. T. Tandy, H. W. Linton, Ira L. Smith, T. J. McReynolds, Dr. F. M. Stites, Dr. H. P. Sights, S. Y. Trimble, A. H. Eckles, L. E. Foster, P. B. Brooks, Jno. F. Bible, Jouett Henry, T. W. Blakey, Frank Rives, J. W. Downer, T. C. Underwood, Chas. M. Meacham, L. H. Davis, A. R. Kasey and H. D. Smith.

Prof. H. G. Brownell's resignation was received, which was accepted with regret.

Evening Wedding.

Miss Mary Belle Underwood and Mr. Ross Myers were married at the Cumberland Presbyterian parsonage at 6 o'clock Wednesday by the pastor, Rev. J. B. Eshman. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to the groom's farm, in the northern part of the county. The bride is the popular daughter of J. T. Underwood and the groom is a son of H. C. Myers.

OPTION ON LIBRARY SITE

Secured By the Mayor as a Surprise For the Public.

PARK SITE IS ABANDONED

But the Test Suit Will Be Carried to the Court of Appeals.

In order to avoid a year's delay in the erection of the Carnegie Library, Mayor Meacham on Thursday secured from the First Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., an option on its vacant lot fronting 70 feet on Liberty street and extending back 100 feet on Eighth street. The cost price has already been provided for in the resolution of December 12, 1912, pledging $1500 for the library for 1913. As the library was not built, the first year's appropriation pledged can be legally used for the purchase of the lot. This does not mean that the test suit will be dropped. The appeal has already been taken and it will be carried through the Court of Appeals in order to secure a decision on the uses the park can be put to. Good lawyers are still divided on the opinion given by Judge Hanbery, many holding that it will be reversed. But be this as it may, the knocking on the park site has created a lack of united support for the library as a public institution and the Mayor decided to secure the option above referred to, after considering several sites. A meeting of the Council was called last night to act upon the matter, the Councilmen having nearly all approved the action taken by Mayor Meacham.

The lot is regarded even by the enemies of the library enterprise as a desirable one. It is midway between the depots, the police stations, and the hotels and a majority of the churches of the city are within two squares. It will be one block from the new government building and almost opposite the Avalon. The plans of the building will not have to be altered, except the basement story will be above ground instead of four feet under ground. The cost will not be increased by this slight change. The lot will allow a 12-foot grass plot in front, a 16-foot yard in the rear and will be 8 feet wider than the building, with no possibility of having its light and ventilation interfered with. Should there be any trouble with water in the basement, which is unlikely, the big sewer emptying at Ninth street runs by the lot and a drain pipe could be run into it from the basement floor.

The Library Directors are all pleased with the lot and some of them say they prefer it to the Peace Park site, as it is much more centrally located.

FARMER FALLS

From Tier Pole And is Badly Injured.

Marcellus McAlpin, of the Laytons, ville neighborhood, fell from a tier pole in a tobacco barn last Saturday and sustained serious injuries. The fall rendered him unconscious, in which condition he remained for two days. He was reported yesterday to be slightly improved.

Capitalists Interested.

Two men by the name of Zinke, one from Chicago and the other from Fondulac, Wis., are here watching the operation of the airship balancer being tried out by aviator DeLloyd Thompson. Should the invention prove a success, something will be doing in the way of patent right buying or manufacturing the apparatus.

EXCURSION TO DEATH

Crowded Train Wrecked Near Eufaula, Ala., Thursday Morning.

FIFTEEN KILLED OUTRIGHT.

Nearly 200 Persons Injured, Many of Whom May Die.

Eufaula, Ala., Nov. 14.—Three coaches of an excursion train carrying five hundred people to the Barbour county fair in this city left the rails of the Central of Georgia Railroad at 8 o'clock yesterday morning seventeen miles south of Eufaula and rolled down a thirty-foot embankment. Fifteen dead and nearly two hundred injured were taken from the wreck late this afternoon, and others are so badly injured that the death list will be materially increased.

WOMAN TO HANG

For Murder of Her Husband In Connecticut.

Mrs. Nellie Wakefield, twenty-four years old, one of sixteen children, who insisted that she was not properly reared because of a large family her father had to care for, is under sentence of death in New Haven, Conn., for killing her husband last June. He was considerably older than she. She says he treated her cruelly.

Then James Plew came along. He had her children and treated her kindly. After a while she began to think more of him than her husband. Then they took him out in the woods and killed him. Two weeks later, drawn back to the scene, in accord with the tradition about murderers, they were traced and caught. Plew confessed. Mrs. Wakefield pleaded not guilty and was convicted and sentenced to hang Mar. 4. Governor Baldwin is receiving many letters asking him to pardon her, but he has answered so far that he has power only as one member of the Board of Pardons, which has not yet begun to consider her case.

PRISONER

Permitted to Attend Funeral of His Wife Here.

Alfred Harris, a colored convict in the Eddyville prison, was permitted by Warden John B. Chilton to come here under guard to attend the burial of his wife who died the day before. Harris was sent up from Middlesboro in 1902 for murder. He was given a life sentence, but after serving ten years he was paroled and in a short while he moved to this place. Some months ago he was arrested and on a charge of having violated his parole, he was returned to the penitentiary. When informed of the death of his wife he expressed a desire to attend the funeral and permission was granted by the officials. Harris was returned to prison Wednesday night.

KENTUCKY'S GRAND OLD MAN

Gen. John Breckinridge Castleman a Hero of Two Wars.

UNUSUAL HONORS SHOWN.

Heroic Equestrian Statue of Citizen of Louisville Unveiled There.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12.—With the unveiling here Saturday of an heroic, equestrian statue of General John Breckinridge Castleman, veteran of two wars and long a leading citizen of Kentucky, the residents of Louisville paid unique honors to him. Ceremonies, attended by several thousand citizens, were staged beside the statue, which occupies a commanding position at the entrance to Cherokee park.

The statue, one of the few ever erected to a person during his lifetime, is of bronze, and shows Gen.
Castleman in civilian garb, seated on his famous black mare Caroline. The sculptor is R. Hinton Perry, of New York.

The lieutenant governor, the mayor and several other public men spoke at the exercises, and a letter from Henry Watterson, whose absence in Europe prevented him from delivering the principal address, was read.
UNIQUE RECORD.
Mr. Watterson wrote in part:
"We served together in the field and were fellow exiles in a foreign land, he barred from returning—perhaps the only American who was ever thus signalized. To have been rescued from death by Lincoln, banished by Andrew Johnson, welcomed home by Grant; having worn the gray in perilous enterprises, finally to have worn the blue with distinction; retired from the army of the United States as a general officer, is a record shared, I am sure, by no other. Yet his chief claim upon us is that of the citizen and neighbor who through a generation has given great energies and talents to civil duties the most important and useful, commending himself as an official and endearing himself as a man."

Gen. Castleman was a major under Morgan in the civil war and headed an expedition which sought the delivery of Confederate prisoners in Illinois and Indiana, but was captured. The parole given him was revoked by President Johnson and he lived for a time abroad. He volunteered for service in the war with Spain and was discharged as a brigadier-general, declining an appointment of the same rank in the regular army, tendered by Pres. McKinley.
For years he has served except during occasional republican municipal administrations as president of the Louisville board of park commissioners. He is credited with having done more to give Louisville its splendid system of parks than any other one person.

SPRINGFIELD IS LUCKY

The Rex Amusement Co. To Start Play House There
Soon.

ROBT. E. WALLER, MANAGER.

Building Being Erected Replica
of Hopkinsville's Pretty Modern House.

Springfield, Tenn., is to be congratulated on soon having a theatre,
to be opened by The Rex Amusement Co., of this city. We assure the people of Springfield that they will have something to be proud of, for everything The Rex people do is always of the best.

A new building is being built for the company and will be a replica of The Rex Theatre here. The only difference is that the Springfield building is not quite so wide as the one here but is deeper. It is to be furnace heated and brilliantly lighted with electricity and the floor will slope from the front and opera chairs will be used. The company is planning to have their initial moving pictures thrown on the canvass the first of the year. Springfield may rest assured that the very best of movies will be furnished, as the reels used by The Rex here will be sent direct to Springfield for exhibition
there.

Another thing the Springfield people are to have, though we cannot well afford to spare him, is a manager that will please them. Mr.
Robt. E. Waller, who has been Mr.
Shrode's assistant, will have full control at Springfield. Besides being a perfect gentleman in deportment, he knows how to please the people. He has a word of cheer for everybody and is a young man who makes friends of everybody he meets.
He is faithful in business but is never too much engaged to prevent him from being courteous and agreeable.

Blind Boy Given Sight.

that he could be made to see by an operation that would cost $50. The money was raised and the boy has been discharged from the hospital with sight for the first time.

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

THE CIMEX LECTULARIUS

Would You Know This One If You Were To Meet Him At Night?

The government has issued a bulletin in about the "Cimex lectularius" sometimes familiarly referred to as the "bed bug," from which this extract is taken:

It is an animal that displays a certain degree of wariness and intelligence from its long association with man. Like nearly all insects, parasites of animals having had slight necessity for extensive locomotion, it has after many ages lost its wings. The absence of wings is a fortunate circumstance, since otherwise there would be no safety from these pests, even for the most thorough house-keeper.

Another characteristic of this insect is the very distant odor which it exhales, an odor characteristic of many plant insects as well. The possession of this odor, disagreeable as it is, is also a fortunate circumstance, as it is considerable aid in detecting the presence of its owner.

The "Cimex" though normally feeding on human blood, may subsist on much simpler food. No other explanation would seem to account for the fact that houses long unoccupied are still infested with this pest. The insect however is quite capable of leaving any quarters where it is unable to thrive, and will often migrate to an adjoining house if the residents leave its present habitation vacant. It displays such apparent intelligence in using every means of escape as windows, walls, water pipes and gutters that it may be the misfortune of any housewife to have her premises invaded, despite the best of care. The insect also displays a surprising facility for concealment, and will abandon beds before daylight and go to distant quarters for protection far beyond the reach of the most diligent search.

This is the same "animal" about which a Kentucky poet once wrote: The June bug has a gaudy wing, The lightning bug a flame, The bedbug has no wings at all, But he gets there all the same.

Wife's Desperate Deed.

Mrs. B. L. Banks, a prominent woman at Richmond, Ky., shot and killed her 12 year-old son and then killed herself. The tragedy followed the sudden death of her husband of pneumonia.

Joke of Years Ago.

A clergyman was preaching a sermon upon "Death," in the course of which he asked the question: "Is it not a solemn thought?" His four-year-old boy, who had been listening in rapt attention to his father, immediately answered in a shrill, piping voice, so as to be heard throughout the house: "Yes, sir, it is."—Vintage of 1863.

OF COURSE, NO REFLECTION!

Sir Frank Lockwood was on one occasion conducting the defense of a person charged with cattle-stealing, and was pressing a witness in cross-examination to ascertain how far he was away from the animals at a certain time.

"How could you tell they were beasts?" he asked.

"Because I could see 'em!"

"And how far off can you tell a beast?"

Witness looked calmly at Sir Frank, and said: "Just about as far as I am from you!"

DIVER'S DISEASE.

"What," inquired the Sunday school teacher of her youthful pupils—"what are divers diseases?"

Bashful or ignorant, the scholars clung tenaciously to the doctrine that little boys should be seen and not heard.

"Come," pursued the teacher, "can't any of you tell me?"

Then Johnnie's arm shot up.

"Well," asked the teacher.

"Please, miss," answered Johnnie, "water on the brain."—Sacred Heart Review.

Getting Too Frequent.

Two little white girls on their way to school were attacked by negro men last week, one near Christiansburg and the other near Fulton. Both were saved when their screams attracted attention and the assailants fled.

Classics in Old Play.

Now that we come to think of it, Bartley Campbell's great melodrama, "The White Slave," which a grand jury never went to see, wasn't a regular white slave play at all. But it did contain two classics: "Strike, death is welcome!" and "Rags are royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake!"—New York Press.

Of Lyceum Course--Some Signed Articles From Our Leading Citizens.

"I approve of a Lyceum Course from the fact, that outside of the mere amusement and entertainment afforded, no where do I know of such a strong educational structure for inculcating knowledge. I am heartily in favor of a Lyceum Course."

Twenty-five Women Elected.

Five more women were elected county superintendent in Kentucky at the last election than ever before, according to the list in the Department of Education. There are at present twenty women superintendents. This month twenty-five were elected. Forty-six superintendents were re-elected and seventy-four new ones, every one of the latter of whom must possess state teachers' certificates or diplomas in order to qualify to assume the office. Usually about half the superintendents are re-elected.

BATTERBEE'S TALK

By KENNETT HARRIS.

The senior partner of Wallis & Ehrmann said to the junior member of the firm: "Have you noticed how particularly chipper and independent old Batterbee has been in his manner lately?"

"Yes," replied Ehrmann, the junior. "He's acting too gay altogether. It's a little demoralizing to the office force. I guess we'd better fire him and give Tarkins his job."

"He's been with us close on to 20 years," Ehrmann said. "He's faithful and honest and—cheap. The old man might find it hard to get another job at his age."

"That's his look-out," said the dapper-like Ehrmann, blowing a speck of dust from his shirt cuff. "This isn't an eleemosynary institution. Tarkins is cheap, too if you come to that. Who's there? Come in."

An elderly man in a threadbare office coat came into the room and laid three large canvas-bound books on a side table. Then he approached the desk and in a mild voice said: "I'd like to have a few minutes' talk with you gentlemen, if you are not too busily engaged."

"We're busy now, Mr. Batterbee," said the junior partner, snappishly. "Some other time. What are you bringing that cash book and those ledgers for?"

"They have some bearing on the subject I wished to discuss with you, sir," said Mr. Batterbee, respectfully, but with a curious steadfast look. "If you will excuse me, I think perhaps it would be well to take the matter up at once. It's rather important."

"Well, go ahead, Batterbee," said the senior partner, tolerantly. "Let him say what he has to say now, Ehrmann."

"Thank you, sir," said the subordinate. "In the first place, I wish to call your attention to the fact that I have been in the employ of the house for 20 years."

"We know that," said Mr. Wallis. "In fact, we were just speaking of it. I had mentioned it to Mr. Ehrmann."

"Ah!" said Mr. Batterbee. "Yes! Well, during that time I think I may say that I have discharged my office duties with zeal, diligence and intelligence. You will grant that, I hope?"

"Certainly," admitted Mr. Wallis.

"Nevertheless," continued Mr. Batterbee, "my salary at the present time is $25 per week, and considering that I have a family to support, and—"

"See here, Mr. Batterbee," said Mr. Ehrmann. "We can't help your having a family, you know. We're not to blame for that. And this isn't an eleemosynary insti—"

"Pardon me," interrupted Mr. Batterbee, with a dignified wave of the hand. "I am quite aware of the fact, but merit, perhaps—"

"Merit cuts no ice with the market price and the law of supply and demand."

"These books that I have brought in have been carefully examined by you, Mr. Ehrmann, at least once a month. You are an expert accountant, and a good business man. If there had been any flaw or fault in them, I am sure you would have detected it, and would not have hesitated to apprise me of the fact."

"You bet I wouldn't have hesitated," said Mr. Ehrmann, with a short laugh. "Then, I assume, that you have had no fault to find?"

"Mr. Batterbee," said the senior partner, gently, "I think that we might cut short a discussion which I am afraid can only prove painful. We cheerfully admit the value of your services, but, while your salary has not been large, it has been as much—even more than we could afford to pay, looking at it from a business point. We can get the same services performed for us by a younger man for even less money. Now, I may as well tell you that we were talking over this very matter, and profits on the business having sensibly declined in the past few years, we feel that not only can we advance no salaries, but, I regret to say, we must discontinue with your services at the close of the current week."

"That's the size of it, Batterbee," said Ehrmann, briskly. "Business is business."

"Just so," said Mr. Batterbee. Now, let's get down to business. To begin with, you gentlemen have misunderstood me. I am not asking you for any increase of salary. I had not the remotest intention of doing so. I want to work for the firm without any salary at all."

"What!" exclaimed Ehrmann and Wallis.

"—But for a share of the profits," continued Mr. Batterbee, calmly. "In short, I propose that you take me into the firm as an equal partner."

Ehrmann broke into loud laughter, but the senior partner regarded the elderly clerk with a close and serious attention.

"If you don't mind, I will sit down," said Mr. Batterbee, drawing up a chair. "Standing very long fatigues me, I find. Mr. Ehrmann, if you feel that you are sufficiently recovered, I will go on. Of course, I must show you how you would be justified in taking the step I propose. Possibly this might interest you to start with." He drew a brown leather covered bank book from his pocket, and handed it to Mr. Wallis. "You will observe," he continued, "that the account was opened with the bank in January, 1890. If I remember rightly, it was one month after my third unsuccessful application for an increase of salary. You will observe that the deposits have been made at regular interval ever since, but in increasing amounts; also that no charges have been drawn against these sums, placed to my credit. The interest has been compounded semi-annually, and altogether the sum total is now nearly $90,000."

Mr. Wallis gasped and handed the bank book to Mr. Ehrmann, who turned pale as he looked over the columns of figures.

"Where did you get it?" he asked with starting eyes.

Mr. Batterbee smiled easily. "I thought you would be likely to ask me that time-honored question," he said. "At the same time you must pardon me if I decline to answer it. I shall not tell it—for it is not in that bank now. It is accessible, but not that bank."

"I fancy, gentlemen," he resumed, after a silent pause, during which the partners looked into each other's eyes. "I fancy that you have your suspicions—entirely groundless, of course, as Mr. Ehrmann can testify, he having carefully examined my accounts. I think, Mr. Ehrmann, you will admit that the man who could embezzle $90,000, under your very nose (an altogether ridiculous supposition), would be a man of no ordinary ability."

"If you have, you're a dandy," exclaimed Ehrmann, startled into involuntary admiration.

"I am not talking of myself," corrected Mr. Batterbee. "Please bear that in mind. I may say, however, that if, finding ordinary and conventional methods of demonstrating the fact that I had ability had failed, I had taken such a peculiar, course, my natural honesty would lead me to make full restitution."

He repossessed himself of the bank book that Ehrmann had laid down, and waited.

"See here, Batterbee," said the senior partner, suddenly, dropping his hitherto suave manner, and speaking quickly and unasily, "stop beating the bush, and come down to hard facts. We're not babies. Now, what is it you want?"

"I've told you already," said Mr. Batterbee. "I'm trying to make you recognize the fact that I'm a man—a man with flesh and blood, and brains and spirit, and not a damned machine," he added, fiercely and bringing his fist down on the desk with a bang. "If I have proved that to you—by 20 hard years in your service," he resumed, in his customary even tones, "if your daily observation of me has proved to you that I have the business at my fingers' ends in all its branches, and that I could extend and revivify the business if I had a chance; if your known generosity, coupled with your self interest inclines you to reward me—then I ask you to take me into partnership, as I have said."

"How about restitution?" asked Ehrmann.

"Nothing about restitution," replied Mr. Batterbee. "I don't understand your allusion. It occurs to me to mention that if the considerations I have mentioned impel you to offer me the partnership, I would be quite willing to put a little capital into the concern—say $90,000—the savings of my modest little salary, gentlemen."

"We must have time to consider your proposition, Mr. Batterbee," said Mr. Wallis at last.

"Very well, sir," said Mr. Batterbee. "If you will allow me an hour's leave of absence from the office, I will return by that time with my attorney, who will provide himself with the necessary contract for your signature, if you think favorably of the idea I have submitted."

Within the appointed time Mr. Batterbee and his legal friend appeared and were conducted into the private of the firm. Mr. Wallis welcomed them with a smiling face. Mr. Ehrmann looked sulky, but he, too, rose and shook hands.

"Well, Mr. Batterbee," said Mr. Wallis, "I believe that you have rather more than an inkling of what I am about to say. It gives me genuine pleasure to tell you that in consideration of your long and faithful services, and as a mark of our recognition and appreciation of your ability, Mr. Ehrmann and myself have decided to ask you to come into the firm."

Selling Land by Balloon.

America is known as the home of the enterprising land agent and probably no feat performed elsewhere in the line of selling "lots" has been equaled by the exploit of one Los Angeles man. He had almost convinced a customer of the merits of a certain suburban lot, but the prospective client demurred at signing a contract without seeing the property for which he was expected to pay out his good money.

It was a little too late in the afternoon to go out, and besides, the agent's motor car was in use, but it would never do to let the customer get away, as he might change his mind or see some other agent.

The salesman had an idea. A showman's captive balloon makes frequent ascents just a few streets away from his office, rising to the end of a 1,000-foot cable and carrying passengers at $1 a trip.

With a little urging the customer was induced to take the aerial journey, and from that altitude the agent pointed out the suburban lot, showing its exact location and the character of the surrounding property quite as clearly as if they were actually on the ground. Before they descended the man had agreed to buy the lot.

CHEERING UP OF PATSY

By L. MERRIFIELD.

"You don't know how I feel, mother, dear, about going up home and leaving Patsy here—"

"Er—do you know any friend of Cora's at Edgemore named Patsy, Rex?" asked Mrs. Clews, looking up from her letter.

"Must be Patricia Boyd, mater. Cora's pet name for her, probably. Why?" Rex moved lazily from the sun parlor into the breakfast room. "She's a nice girl and good family, you know. Ask her up, why don't you?"

"Listen, though, Rex." She read on aloud:

"Patsy has been through some terrible grief the past summer that the rest of us can only guess at. She will never be the same again, mother, never. You know how some girls take things to heart, and Patsy is wounded to the quick. I will tell you more later, but you can guess what it was. MAN! I think, taken as a class, they are absolutely irresponsible and without good faith or real sentiment. I don't see how you ever found father, for he is, of course, an exception."

"Don't laugh, Rex," reproved Mrs. Clews, smiling herself. "Cora is in earnest, really. We had better ask Patsy here and try to cheer her up. How many of the Dartmouth boys did you ask?"

"Four. The other two fellows I wanted went up home to Vermont. I'm glad the Abbot's coming."

A week later Cora arrived with Patricia Boyd. Patsy, as everyone called her, was small and slender with a mass of red gold hair, eyes brown and soft as a moth's wing, and a drooping mouth that pleaded for sympathy. In her dark green traveling suit with brown furs she was a charming picture, and Rex forgot her secret trouble when he lifted her out of the tonneau bodily.

Later he stopped his sister on the way downstairs, led her mysteriously into the small writing room next the library, and closed the door.

"What's the matter with Patsy?" he asked.

"Rex, I think you're positively brutal," Cora said, hotly. "I shall tell father if you don't open that door."

"Cora, I'm overboard, swimming for life, and you hold a life preserver in your grasp to rescue your own dear brother. I'm in love with Patsy."

"You'll never even get her to listen to you, Rex. She's frantically in love with someone she met last summer at one of the coast resorts. But he was one of the coast resorts."

Rex returned her look blankly. "What resort?"

"I don't quite remember—Watch Hill, or Naragansett, or Block Island, one of them, anyway. She has a snap shot of him, and oh, Rex, he is splendid. You never saw such eyes."

"And she wouldn't marry him because he was a head waiter?"

Cora nodded. "Certainly not. The Boyds are very important people in Baterson, Mass."

The day the Dartmouth boys arrived Patsy kept to her room and nursed a headache. Cora, dressed in her daintiest, helped her mother make them welcome, and held Jack Pryor close to her side all the evening.

The following morning Patsy trailed down the stairs a bit languidly. Jack stood with his back to the archway, talking to Cora, very ardently and happily, when suddenly he stood up very straight and his face unconsciously hardened. As they were introduced, Patsy raised her long lashes and looked at him with a frightened cry of recognition.

"Oh, do you know Jack already?" asked Cora, quickly.

"He is like some one I used to know," Patsy answered, bravely, and went on.

But the next two weeks were filled with cross purposes and misadventures. Rex kept doggedly on his own way, disregarding the past summer and all of Patsy's notions, and back kept close to Cora's side. One clear cold night they came in from a run over the frozen roads and stood around the great open fire in the reception hall. Rex knelt to take off Patsy's little fur-edged carriage boots and Jack watched the two with a half smile of amusement. When they had left the room with the others he sat alone with Cora before the fire. From the music room came the sound of Patsy's favorite "Traumerel," and Rex's laugh above it.

"I think Patsy will be my sister," said Cora, thoughtfully. "Rex is fearfully sweet on her."

"She's a dear kiddie," Jack answered, "but I don't care much for the type. She's too, as my old country granddad used to put it, light-minded for me."

"Why, Jack, what on earth do you mean? She's had a great sorrow, you know, only last summer."

"Yes, I think I know all about it," said Pryor, slowly. "I happen to be the head waiter. Oh, don't look so startled, Cora. A lot of us Dartmouth boys went for a lark, and we studied social conditions that way, seeing the other side of life from the other fellow's point of view. It was a mighty good lesson in more ways than one. She thought she loved me, but she couldn't stand the social condition. Poor little Patsy!"

"You may keep your pity, Jack Pryor," came Patsy's clear treble behind them, and Rex beamed down on them placidly. "I am quite recovered from my summer fancy, and—you tell him, Rex."

"I'm the cure," grinned Rex.

WHAT so tempting to the laggard appetite as a light, flaky, fruit short cake or a delicate hot biscuit?

Royal makes the perfect short cake, biscuit and muffin, and improves the flavor and healthfulness of all risen flour-foods.

It renders the biscuit, hot-bread and short cake more digestible and nutritious, at the same time making them more attractive and appetizing.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable for the preparation all the year round of perfect foods.

Romantic Wedding.

Russellville, Ky., Nov. 13.—A romantic wedding occurred here last night at the home of J. E. Shelton when Mrs. Mollie Darby, of this city, was married to Mr. Wm. S. M. ore, a wealthy ranchman of New Mexico, whom she had never seen until Monday. They had been introduced by letter, through mutual friends. They left immediately for an extensive bridal trip, accompanied by the bride's only daughter, Miss Mabel Darby.

GONE SOUTH

Rev. Chas. Nourse Will Do Evangelistic Work.

Rev. Chas. Nourse left yesterday for Kentwood, La. His family will remain here for awhile. Mr. Nourse will engage in evangelistic work within the bounds of New Orleans Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church South. He was engaged in this work and was very successful until his eyes became too weak for study and he engaged in the clothing and gents' furnishing goods with Robert S. Green, now of Hooser & Green. Mr. Nourse is a splendid scholar and an earnest preacher and everybody will be glad for his continued success in a work for which he seems to be peculiarly fitted and which he likes better than anything else.

Revival.

Pleasant Hill Baptist church, at Carl, is in the midst of a successful revival. Rev. T. T. Powel, the pastor, is being assisted by Rev. P. E. Herndon.

Preaching.

Tomorrow at the First Presbyterian church, morning and evening. Rev. E. E. Gabbard, of Louisville, will occupy the pulpit. Everybody is invited.

WEALTHY WIDOW

Ends Life By Slow Poison Over Continued Gossip.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Nov. 13 — Mrs. Martha C. Simmons, the wealthy widow of Dr. C. S. Simmons, formerly a successful medicine manufacturer of St. Louis, committed suicide here Tuesday, it became known late today.

A part of the Simmons fortune was made in speculation in Texas land. The town of Simmons, Texas, bears the doctor's name.

Mrs. Simmons took a slow poison to end her life. To a Kansas City physician, to whom she was engaged to be married up to last week, Mrs. Simmons declared that increasing gossip linking her name and that of Dr. Simmons before their marriage had made her despondent. This is supposed to have caused her act.

The Kansas City physician admitted tonight that his engagement to Mrs. Simmons had been broken last week.

"Mrs. Simmons came to my office in Kansas City a week ago and gave me back my ring," said the physician. "At that time she said to me: 'I cannot stand the wagging tongues of the people of Excelsior Springs. I believe I could never make you happy, and I want to die.'"

Forest Notes.

There is a flourishing forest school in the Philippines, and 28 men were graduated with the class of 1913.

The so called Scotch pine is the principal tree in the Prussian forests. Its wood is much like that of the western yellow pine of the United States.

In general it may be stated that the most dangerous forest fire periods in the west are in middle and late summer; in the east they are in the spring and fall.

Because of the importance of forestry at the annual conservation congress in Washington November 18 to 20, an extra day is added to the sessions, Monday, 17th.

It has been suggested that guayacan, a very hard wood of Central America, may furnish shuttle blocks to supplement dogwood and persimmon, now most used, and in danger of becoming exhausted.

Under forest regulations in Colombia, rubber gatherers are required to give the trees a rest period in tapping them for gum. The size, number, and location of the incisions are regulated by law. In the United States similar regulations are in force in the tapping of pines for turpentine on the Florida national forest.

Inspected Fairview Park.

Gen. Bennett H. Young, Commander-in Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, and Col. S. A. Cunningham, editor of the Confederate Veteran, of Nashville, inspected the improvements now being made at the Jefferson Davis Park, in Fairview, this week.

ROBERT BRIDGES, ENGLAND'S POET LAUREATE

A little surprise was arranged for the literary world by Mr. Asquith in the appointment of a poet laureate whom few, if any, had considered a possibility. The London Illustrated papers came out with full-page groups of pictures of Kipling, Noyes, Phillips, Hardy, Massfield, Watson and Mrs. Meynell as likely aspirants, and then Mr. Asquith handed the laurel to Mr. Robert Bridges.

Mr. Bridges comes of a distinguished English family, being the son of John Bridges of St. Nicholas and Walmer, in Kent, and a kinsman of the Rev. Thomas Edward Bridges, D. D., who was from 1823 to 1843 president of Corpus Christi college, Oxford. At Eton, and later at Oxford, Mr. Bridges was noted for his scholarship, but he found time to distinguish himself in athletics. He was an enthusiastic cricketer and oarsman. In 1867 he was placed in the second class in the Final School of Litterae Humaniores. After leaving the university he spent a number of years in foreign travel, familiarizing himself, to an extent unusual for an Englishman, with life on the continent and in the far east.

On his return to London he became a student of medicine at St. Bartholomew's hospital, receiving, in due course, the degree of M. B. at Oxford. He then began the practice of his profession, being regularly attached to the staff of St. Bartholomew's hospital and of the Children's hospital in Great Ormond street. Retiring from practice in 1882, he married and left London for his beautiful rural estate at Yatton, in Berkshire. Since that time he has devoted himself exclusively to literature, and particularly to poetry.

It may be that one of the reasons for the smallness of the company of Mr. Bridges' admirers is his devotion to the most technical and abstruse problems of versification. His book, "Milton's Prosody," is, in the words of Dr. Herbert Warren in "Robert Bridges and Contemporary Poets," one of the most minute and illuminating contributions ever made to the study of English metric generally, and especially to that of Milton's blank verse. Influenced largely by the work of the late W. J. Stone of Radley college, he has written a large number of poems in the classical meters, poems in which the quantities of the syllables, rather than their accents, are the essentials. Of this extremely difficult sort of writing, which can never be thoroughly appreciated except by those intimately familiar with Greek and Latin poetry, a good example is the "Peace Ode," written in June, 1902, on the conclusion of the Boer war. It is unimpaired in its Alcaics.

Interesting to students of the subject as are Mr. Bridges' experiments in classical meters, it is on his work done in the familiar English rhythms that he must depend for popular esteem.

There can really be no difference of opinion about Dr. Robert Bridges' place in English poetry. Among the men poets of today he is unquestionably one of the most entirely poetical. His only rival in fine lyrical quality is Mr. W. B. Yeats, whose true work in poetry is concentrated in some ten or twelve poems, most of the copious writing—plays, and verse—which are to be found in the fine edition of his works that was published some years back by Mr. A. H. Bullen being of a markedly inferior quality.

If the office of laureate is to be confined to a man, there can not be a question but that Dr. Bridges has done the most perfect lyrical work among them, and that all his books will be greatly enhanced in value by the appointment.

But the post of poet laureate, now shorn of all its trappings of office, its need for odes on state occasions and the like, which Dr. Bridges is no more likely to write than Mr. Yeats, should obviously be given to the greatest man of letters, to the man who is not only a fine poet and prose writer.

DOOLITTLE KEPT HIS PROMISE OF RAIN

In the good old days before Dudley Doolittle, representative of the Fourth Kansas district, became famed as a weather prophet, his neighbors depended on the fluttering of the birds, the turning of leaves and barometers to tell them when it was going to rain. But that was before last Labor Day, when Doolittle came into his own.

On that day Doolittle, who is a Democrat, and Fred S. Jackson, his Republican opponent for congress, were to speak from the same platform at Lebo, Kan. Jackson, by choice, was to talk last.

It was a dreadfully hot and sultry day, but no worse than the whole state had experienced for many weeks. Half the farmers in the audience had given up their corn crops as lost on account of the drought. The sky was clear and the sun burned like a big coal of fire.

Dudley started to speak at exactly two o'clock. He looked at his watch and said:

"I promise you that within an hour we shall have rain. Therefore, I shall talk only 45 minutes so that Mr. Jackson may have a chance to say a few words."

"If it rains, we'll vote for you!" shouted many persons in the crowd. Doolittle spoke 40 minutes and then turned to sit down. Before he reached his chair a torrent of rain began to fall. Not only was Jackson unable to speak that afternoon, but so great was the rainfall that his night meeting in the opera house was canceled, too.

And inasmuch as Doolittle kept his promise of rain, the crowd kept its promise of votes.

LORD KITCHENER'S NEW ELECTORAL SCHEME

Just before leaving Egypt recently for a visit in England, Lord Kitchener took a leading part in giving effect to a very important political reform in Egypt. It consists partly in the combination of the general assembly and legislative council into a new body, the legislative assembly, and partly in the institution of a new electoral system. The new legislative assembly has to some extent the right of initiating new legislation, and its numbers have been increased from thirty to eighty-nine.

But the most interesting part of the new reform is the novel method of electing members. The electors are to be divided into groups of fifty, and each group will elect an elector-delegate. The electors-delegate, in turn, will be divided into groups, each representing about 200,000 inhabitants, and each such group will elect one member to the assembly. Every elector-delegate is bound by law to keep in touch with his fifty electors. This system, which gives the humblest peasant an immediate voice in an election, has been described as one of the most effective methods of ascertaining the wishes of a nation ever invented. It also distributes the electoral right more evenly. Hitherto each town, village, or district had only one elector-delegate, irrespective of its population, and thus a large town might have had no greater rights in an election than a small village.

SECRETARY OF BIG FARM LABORERS' UNION

With the winning of the strike in Lancashire, England, farm laborer trade unionism, at the practicability of which so many people had scoffed, shows itself as something of which account must be taken. The English Agricultural Laborers' union is steadily gathering in members in the most unlikely counties, and if it can win in a struggle in a district where the highest agricultural wages in England are paid, there seems to be every chance of its giving a satisfactory account of itself elsewhere. The difficulty of getting farm hands into a union is great, because the men live at great distances from one another, and because their low wages make it impossible for them to subscribe more than five cents a week. As Mr. Edwards (the secretary of the union), an assistant secretary and two organizers receive in all about $1,000 a year, the enthusiasts at the head of the organization are hardly leading it for what they can get out of it! In Scotland a farm servants' union is making sound progress, and is able to publish a remarkable illustrated twenty-page monthly, the style and tone of which reflect no small credit on those directing the movement.

Telephone Wire.

There are 6,000,000 telephone stations in this country, and the amount of wire made use of will total at 12,000,000 miles. Some idea of what this total means may be grasped when we calculate that this length of wire could be wrapped around the earth 500 times and that it would make fifty separate lines from the earth to the moon, but there would not be half enough wire to reach from the earth to our nearest planetary neighbor.

A Strange Story.

Argyle, Mich.—Mrs. Wm. H. Carson, in a letter from Argyle, says: "I was almost wild with pain in my head, and other severe pains, due to womanly troubles. Cardui gave me great relief at once. Further use of Cardui raised me from my bed of agony. Cardui saved my life, and I can't be thankful enough for what it did for me." CEDAR MAKES BEST FENCING

Fence Built of That Material Still Standing After Forty Years of Continuous Service.

I know of a fence in our neighborhood that is still standing after 40 years of continuous service. The posts were made of cedar, charred to six inches above the ground and every one is still well preserved. Another fence of which the posts were not charred, decayed completely after 39 years. Oak and chestnut posts are not as durable as cedar, however, even if charred. Some of the oak posts we buy these days will not last ten years and it is a pretty expensive fence that has to be renewed every ten years. Speaking of fences, I wonder what we are going to do about the wire that some manufacturers are sending out. A great deal of it is made of good material and will stand long wear, but some of it is far from being what it should be. I suppose it is all a question of the honesty of the manufacturer and it is up to us to discover the one who makes honest goods. The experiment stations, some of which spend much time and work analyzing stock foods and fertilizers might find a ripe field in testing of fence wire.

STORE MANURE FOR GARDENS

Practice of Fertilizing Every Year
Late in Fall or in Spring Is Not Always for the Best.

A common practice is to manure the garden every year late in the fall or before planting in the spring, no further attention being given. This practice, however, is not the best.

The manure for the garden should be kept in a large box with a lid or so screened that flies cannot enter it.
Manure heaps are the natural breeding places of these pests, and if they are allowed to remain near the house uncovered will prove a great nuisance.

A good plan is to use a very close wire screen nailed to a frame with hinges for the top. The manure should be spaded often on the top so that the water from the clouds or the sprinkling pot may penetrate to every part of it.

If kept in a box a spout should be placed in one corner at the bottom, so that the water may drain into a sunken barrel.

This will supply liquid manure, which can be used at all seasons where vegetables and flowers are growing.

SIMPLE FOUR-HORSE EVENER

When Made Right Device Will Pull
3-Ton Load Through Mud Holes or Up 30 Per Cent. Grade.

I have a four-horse evener possessing many advantages, writes Charles Fredericks of Freedom, Okla., in the Farmers' Mail and Breeze. A is a 1 1/2-inch gas pipe 5 feet 10 inches long, with a hole 7 inches from each end for brace rod, and two more holes 1 1/2 inches from each end for double tree clevises. B is an oak Explanatory Sketch of Evener.

block 18 inches long, 5 inches wide and about 2 inches thick. One edge is hollowed out for the main tree and the other is rounded off to conform with the brace rod. Holes are drilled into the pipe near the center and nails driven through them into the block. C is the brace rod of five-eighths-inch iron, bent as shown, and with threads cut in each end. The ends are put through the holes in the pipe and tightened up with nuts until the pipe is slightly bent. This holds the block tight at all times. The last thing is to cover the pipe, block and all with a plate of iron bent over it and bolted or screwed down. Small doubletrees must be used. If made right this evener will pull a three-ton load through mud holes or up a 30 per cent. grade. There are no square corners, everything works freely, and there is no chance of either team shirking.

Disposal of Manure.
The most important part of the stable sanitation from the other fellows' standpoint is the disposal of manure.

The liquid manure should be absorbed by the bedding and the bedding changed every day. The solid manure should be cleaned up morning and evening and thrown in a flyproof box or vault. If possible, have it hauled away daily.

Cutting Out the Weeds.
If it is desired to make the place look tidy and neat and keep the weeds from obtaining a more determined hold, they should be cut at the earliest opportunity. A mower will undoubtedly cut nearly all of them.
A scythe will be found necessary only to cut the weeds under the fences
and in the corners.

Cheap and Excellent.
Air-slaked lime, freely dusted everywhere, is cheap and will destroy lice, gapes and the roup.

Docking Lambs.
The lambs should have been docked before this, but if not, the job should be done at once.

Worth Weight in Gold.

Abingdon, Va.—Mrs. Jennie Mc-Call, of this place, says, "I had been troubled with female complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist has it in $1 bottles.

ALL TO THOSE "THAT HAVE"

Conditions in the Literary World
Fashion to Favor the Few Big Sellers.

Those who are acquainted with the record of English literary incomes since Chaucer was a court servitor will not find it a particularly harrowing fact that, according to a London writer, "not more than fifty British novelists make an average annual income of $5,000."

Indeed, some people will find it a ground for regret that Miss Corelli is said to have made $100,000 in a single year, and Hall Caine twice that. The other happy plutocrats of an average income of $25,000 or more are, it is said, Wells, Kipling, Garvice, Stapoole, Conan Doyle and Mrs. Ward. Masfield and Noyes are said to flourish on poetry, and Trevelyan and Morley on biography;
as to the dramatists, we are left to judge only from Shaw's quarrels with the income tax collectors.

These estimates, naturally, are inspired by that striking literary event, Hall Caine's latest publication. Their one significance is that every change affecting English book selling—six-penny editions, the growth of the libraries, even social developments like the motor car and the week end—has been in favor of the few big sellers and against the authors with a small,
select audience; and similar causes are operating in a similar way in America.—New York Post.

SHAME OF HUMANITY GONE

"Witches Weigh House," at Oudewater, Holland, Recently Destroyed by Fire.

The little town of Oudewater, Holland, which is situated on the river Yssel right off the beaten tourist track, has lost by fire one of the most remarkable relics of the middle ages,
the so-called Witches Weigh house.

Early in the sixteenth century the Emperor Charles V., who was born and educated in Holland, granted the town what is perhaps the most curious privilege on record, that of a weigh house which should be the only recognized one to determine officially whether a person was a wizard or a witch.

At a time when witchcraft was universally believed in the weigh house did a great business. It was the burgo-master of the town who determined the weight. If an accused person balanced the scales or was heavier he or she went free, but if lighter a prima facie case of witchcraft was held to be made out, and the unfortunate individual was in imminent danger of losing life or chattels or both.

There are records that witches were weighed in Oudewater as late as the first half of the eighteenth century.

MODERN MAID.

It was getting late at night when the servant girl returned from the shops with various domestic purchases. As she explained the transaction to her mistress she cried out suddenly: "There! If I haven't forgotten the 'am an' eggs for breakfast."

"That's a pity," observed the mistress, but added, with kindly philosophy, "Never mind. The shops will all be shut now. We shall have to manage in the morning with bread and butter and marmalade." The girl stared: "And what shall I have?" she inquired.

"Well, Ellen, I suppose you'll have the same as we do," replied the mistress.

"Yes, Mrs. X," replied Ellen, with some severity; "but let me tell you I can't do my work unless I'm properly fed."—Manchester Guardian.

NOT IN NATURE OF THINGS.

"Colonel," said the man with the hunted look in his eye, "you resided in the far west for many years, did you not?"

"I did."

"Was it a matter of common knowledge and observation out there that landslides happened oftener early in the month of May than at any other time in the year?"

"It was not, so far as I know."

"Then May 1 is not the natural and heaven ordained moving day?
That is what I have always contended! Thank you, colonel!"

TURK SAVES KAVALA

Rows All Night and Brings Greek Fleet to Town.

Fisherman Heard That Bulgars Had Ordered Massacre and Sacking of Town and Went Alone in a Small Boat to Rescue.

The Salonika correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph sent the following graphic description of how Kavala, the town on the Aegean sea which was the crux of the peace negotiations at Bucharest, was saved from fire and slaughter at the hands of the retreating Bulgarians:

"I have heard from an eye-witness most striking and picturesque details as to the way in which Kavala was saved just in the nick of time. The mass of the Bulgar army, in danger of having its retreat cut off from the north, had evacuated the town, leaving behind only a small force of 200 men, commanded by a lieutenant, with orders to burn and sack the town next day. The terrified people had hidden themselves in their darkened houses, behind locked doors and barred windows. Rumors had gone about that the garrison quartered in the fortress overlooking the town was laying in large stores of petroleum, and that bayonets were being sharpened and guns loaded. There was nothing to hope for or to do; only with unavailing curses and prayers await the coming of death in its most hideous form.

"Through the pitch-black streets a Turkish boatman crept down to the port. No boat was allowed to leave the bay, patrols faced the quay, searchlights flashed over the still and silent waters. Very quietly, lying flat on the gray stones, he loosened his little craft, crawled in, and, with muffled oars, pulled away. None heard him, and the searchlights playing all around him left him in darkness. It was, says he, as if a great hand were stretched over him, and its shadow lay around his boat.

He cleared the bay, and with all his might and main bent to his oars. Far across the sea, 18 miles away in the Bay of Thassos, lay the Greek fleet. Through the long hours of the night he rowed, heedless of aching arms and limbs, rowed for his life and the lives of thousands who lay behind him in the quaking town. In the early morning the port of Thassos opened before him. The great ships were there, always under pressure, straining at their anchors.

"With the last effort he pulled up to the side, and the startled sailors hanging over the gangway heard a cry of warning, a cry for help, rise into the night. 'For the sake of Allah and for the sake of your God, come quick, for at the sunrise the Bulgars sack the town.'

"In the little town the hours of agony crept slowly by. Women wept over their sleeping children and men ground their teeth in useless rage. Availing themselves of the shelter of the houses, two men had managed to reach the church and climb up into the bell tower. Through the night they strained their eyes over the empty waters of the bay which for months past no ship had entered.

"At morn a thick column of smoke rose behind the promontory. What could it be? With beating, shaking hearts they watched the nose of a ship creep round the corner, a long, low, gray thing with protruding guns and funnels vomiting smoke.

"It was a destroyer. At the stern floated something they could not see. Yet, God in heaven, it was blue with a white cross! The next instant the bell was clanging out a crazy, jerky peal, and a frantic creature was tearing down the streets shrieking, 'The Greek fleet! The Greek fleet!'

"In one moment shutters were let down, doors burst open, and a shouting, sobbing crowd rushed to the sea. The destroyer had stopped, a boat was lowered, the captain was rowed ashore. He had hardly time to touch the ground before 50 strong arms had caught him up and, with weeping and with laughter, carried him shoulder high through the cheering streets, whilst behind him, contentedly nodding his red-frezzed head, unobtrusively walked the simple Turkish fisherman who had saved the town."

QUESTION NAME OF WRITER

Serious Controversy Rages as to Proper Cognomen of the Author of "The Raven."

A bitter controversy has arisen between the architect who designed a new school building on Rittner street, in this city, and members of the school board over the spelling of the full name Poe.

Over the entrance of the building in large letters is engraved "Edgar Allen Poe."

Simon Gratz, member of the board of education, insists that the correct spelling of Poe's middle name is "Allan," and he has demanded that the architect make a new engraving. The architect maintains that "Allen" is correct, and refuses to change it.

The argument may be thrashed out in councils. Gratz asserts that Poe's middle name was obtained from John Allan, a Richmond man, who adopted Poe when two years old, in 1811. The new school is a short distance from the little brick house where Poe wrote his famous "Gold Bug."

Reference books give Poe's middle name as Allan.—Philadelphia Dispatch to New York World.

PODUNK LIMITED

Stopped at the Opera House Last Night.

The advance sale of seats assured a big crowd at the Opera House last night to see "Fun on the Podunk Limited," under the auspices of the Evergreen Lodge K. of P. It was presented by home talent. There 24 characters in the cast. Capt. E. W. Clark was the conductor and kept things moving.

There were several musical numbers and a number of specialties of an amusing character. There was no plot to be worked out, but a round of fund kept the crowd in a good humor from start to finish.

GRAPE FRUIT

Can Be Seen In Window Of This Office.

W. R. Brumfield got back from his farm in Florida last night after an absence of two weeks. He brought home with him a bunch of grapefruit. There are thirty of them, all on one vine. They can be seen in the window of this office today. The fruit grew within about 14 miles of Mr. Brumfield's farm.

Mrs. Monroe Bullard was called to Bowling Green yesterday on account of the death of her aunt, Mrs. T. R. Neill.

Mrs. Sara Bell Wharton is visiting Mrs. Chas. M. Meacham.

Education of Children.

Education should be of the kind that is of use to the child as a foundation for work. Education should be so arranged that the child may take what is best for his particular case. A trained expert who studies each child and prescribes his kind of education—judging by the symptoms as does the physician—will be worth his price in guiding the youth into training. We wrong the children by omitting this form of education.

TOURING PARTY

After Being on Road Since February, Here Yesterday.

Mr. Becker, wife and son and daughter were in the city yesterday. They left about 2:30 for Russellville.

Mr. Becker's home is in New York City, but he and his family spent a month or so in Russellville, where he was born and raised. He has several hundred acres of asphalt land near Russellville. They will shortly go back to New York for the winter. Mr. Becker and family started from Denver the first of February in their large touring car and have been on the road pretty much ever since with the exception of six weeks' stay in one place on account of the chauffeur's having a spell of typhoid fever. They have traveled over the biggest part of Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and California.

Powers Behind Wilson.

United support from the great powers abroad for the American policy toward Mexico, it is stated, caused the withholding of the statement on Mexico by President Wilson and the expression of the belief in Washington that the elimination of Huertawouldsoon be an accomplished fact, and that the financial blockade now on would prove more of a burden than can be borne by the provisional government of Mexico.

The Turkey Market.

There is going to be much doing in shipping turkeys to the large cities. Every day wagons arrive loaded with crates and the delivery of the crop, much of which has already been bought, will begin in earnest the coming week.

Judge Hanbery Affirmed.

For the fourth or fifth time during the present sitting of the Court of Appeals Judge Hanbery has been sustained in decisions rendered here. As to how often in other counties of this district we are not prepared to say. It is very gratifying to his friends to have so many of Judge Hanbery's decisions sustained at Frankfort. Probably no man who has ever sat on the local bench has been reversed so few times as the present judge—at least in this county. One of the cases that has recently been passed upon and judgment sustained was that of Mrs. Mary L. Walker, widow of the late J. Burch Walker. Mrs. Walker, through her attorneys, Judge C. H. Bush and Judge W. T. Fowler, brought suit against the Tennessee Central Railroad Co., for a horse killed by one of the defendants' trains. They secured a judgment for $250. Downer & Russell, attorneys for the T. C., took an appeal. The judgment of the lower court was affirmed.

Sprained Ankle.

Mr. M. N. Smothermon is confined to his room at the Elks Home from the effect of a fall he received last Wednesday. The accident occurred at Main and Eighth streets, when he sprained one of his ankles by his foot slipping, which threw him to the ground.

Refused to Increase.

Council last night voted down a proposition to increase the salary of the city attorney from $650 to $800 a year, only five members of the nine present being in favor of the increase.—Bowling Green News.

Prominent Man Killed.

Mayfield, Ky., Nov. 14.—Dan. H. Slaughter, one of the leading citizens of Wingo, near here, where he conducted a large general store, was killed by a freight train while crossing a track near his home.
